General Disclosures Statements

Many professional publications and conferences have taken to requiring their authors and presenters to disclose ties with the pharmaceutical industry or other funding sources which may be seen as potential conflicts of interest. While those types of issues rarely impact our work, we still view transparency as an important value and want to provide as full a disclosure as possible. None of the following professional connections are believed to create any inherent conflicts of interest, although if you or your attorney believe there might be a specific issue in your case created by these associations we want you to have that information up front. Please make sure to review our CVs as well for details on our work history, memberships in professional associations, co-presenters, and co-authors.

He also provides formal supervision for Lauren Gordon, of Rockwall, Texas; Peggy Kemp, of Whitesboro, Texas; Stephanie Kosut of Conroe, Texas; Cara Pruitt, of Mansfield, Texas; Rebecca Smith, of Conroe, Texas; and Kevin Weatherly of Greenville, Texas, each of whom provide evaluations through agencies in their respective areas. In the past Dr. Robb has retained the services of former judge Chris Oldner, and Paul Hewett, partners at the law firm of Orsinger, Nelson, Downing & Anderson, to address administrative issues regarding obtaining case records for a child custody evaluation from the Collin County Community Supervision and Corrections Department (probation).

Dr. Robb also manages a staff of visitation supervisors through his agency and offers direct services as detailed on the agency web page.

In addition to clinical and client-centered forensic work, our staff (particularly Dr. Robb) occasionally provide consultation services and expert witness services for attorneys on complex cases involving issues of behavioral health and family systems.
